Awesome Company

Introduction

Successful business depends on Customer Service. It is essential to understand that every employee is involved in customer service. Everyone in every organization is a customer of some kind. It has been proven that customers would rather switch to another company than tolerate poor service. Research indicates, even if there is no conflict, over 60% of all customers quit dealing with a business because of indifference on the part of some employee.

The ability to interact effectively with customers may be the critical difference between success or failure in our work life. Effective customer service begins with an accurate perception of our own work behavioral style. This report was designed to quantify information on how you see your own behavior in the workplace. That information may then be used for you to learn how others perceive your behavior. This knowledge will assist you in formulating strategies in meeting customer needs.

General Characteristics

Based on your responses, the report has selected general statements to provide you with a broad understanding of your Customer Service Style. This section of the report identifies the natural customer service style you bring to the job.

Connie likes to start and finish activities. Others who work with her know they can depend on her. When the time is right, Connie can stand up aggressively for what she believes. She requires many good reasons, as well as the benefits involved, before agreeing to making changes. She can be friendly with others in many situations, but primarily with groups of established friends and associates. She is sociable and enjoys the uniqueness of each human being. Connie is family-oriented. She may go to great lengths to ensure the "happiness" of her personal or work family. She wins through hard work and persistence. She likes to stay with one task until it is completed. She doesn't resist change as much as she resists being changed. She needs to be an active participant in situations that will impact her work. She is usually steady, easygoing and relaxed. At times, Connie would like to slow the world down and cut out some of the activities people want her involved in. She is good at concentrating in order to listen and learn. She is not easily distracted by peripheral activity. She wants to be seen as a responsible person, and will avoid behavior that could be seen by others as irresponsible. When challenged, she becomes more objective.

Connie may be reluctant to initiate new approaches to doing things. If she is shown the benefits, she will consider new procedures. She is good at analyzing situations that can be felt, touched, seen, heard, personally observed or experienced. Her motto is, "facts are facts." She finds making decisions easier when she knows that others she respects are doing the same thing; she then has a feeling of stability and "family." She uses logic to assist her in decision making. This tendency is helpful to others in her group. Connie can be sensitive to the feelings of others and is able to display real empathy for those who are experiencing difficulties. She tends to make decisions based on past experiences. She prefers the "tried and true." Logic is important when trying to influence her. She pays more attention to logic than emotional "hype." When challenged she can become objective, searching hard for facts and figures. This may be her way of defending her decisions.

Connie tends to be possessive of information; that is, she doesn't voluntarily share information with others outside of her team. This may be a blessing, or a curse, to her superiors. She may guard some information unless she is asked specific questions. She will not willingly share unless she is comfortable with the knowledge she possesses about the topic. Sometimes she will withdraw from a verbal battle. If she feels strong about an issue, she may retreat to gather her resources and then return to take a stand! She can be outgoing at times. Basically introverted, she will "engage" in social conversation when the occasion warrants. Connie likes to know what is expected of her in a working relationship and have the duties and responsibilities of others who will be involved explained. Communication is accomplished best by well-defined avenues. Rarely does she display her emotions; that is, she projects a good poker face. Others may get the feeling that she is unfriendly, when in reality she is not. She remains aloof from active participation in unfamiliar groups. She will talk more, however, in a group of people she trusts and has known for a long time. She is somewhat reserved with those she doesn't trust or know. After trust has been established, she may be open and candid.

The Success Insights® Wheel

The Success Insights® Wheel is a powerful tool popularized in Europe. In addition to the text you have received about your behavioral style, the Wheel adds a visual representation that allows you to:

- View your natural behavioral style (circle).
- View your adapted behavioral style (star).
- Note the degree you are adapting your behavior.
- If you filled out the Work Environment Analysis, view the relationship of your behavior to your job.

Notice on the next page that your Natural style (circle) and your Adapted style (star) are plotted on the Wheel. If they are plotted in different boxes, then you are adapting your behavior. The further the two plotting points are from each other, the more you are adapting your behavior.

If you are part of a group or team who also took the behavioral assessment, it would be advantageous to get together, using each person's Wheel, and make a master Wheel that contains each person's Natural and Adapted style. This allows you to quickly see where conflict can occur. You will also be able to identify where communication, understanding and appreciation can be increased.
